Chapter 132: The Divine Armada

The Divine Triad’s ingenuity reached its zenith with the creation of their unparalleled warfleets. These fleets were not merely tools of warfare; they were embodiments of power, precision, and versatility, crafted to protect the balance of the multiverse. Among their creations, the divine warships stood as the crowning achievement, a testament to their boundless creativity and might.

A Hundred Thousand Divine Warships

Each divine warship, a colossal behemoth of metal and magic, possessed the capability to terminate an entire realm. Armed with devastating weaponry powered by the pure energies of the Absolute Crown, these ships could obliterate threats across dimensions with a single, calculated strike.

Now imagine not one, but a hundred thousand of these warships, moving as a unified armada. The sheer scale of their destructive potential was enough to make even the most audacious enemies think twice before challenging the Divine Triad’s dominion.

The Fleet of Balance

Accompanying the warships were millions of space-frigates, agile and deadly vessels designed for reconnaissance, interception, and rapid deployment. These frigates acted as the warships’ vanguard, forming an intricate web of protection around the larger vessels. Together, the fleet operated with military precision, a synchronized force capable of overwhelming any opposition.

This divine armada wasn’t merely a tool of destruction—it was a masterpiece of divine engineering, a fleet crafted with the sole purpose of maintaining balance across the multiverse.

Moving Arsenal

The warships were brimming with advanced weaponry, including energy cannons capable of firing concentrated beams of primordial light, shadow, and fire. These weapons could pierce through even the most impenetrable defenses, reducing realms to dust if necessary. The ships also carried an arsenal of divine missiles and destructive spells, ensuring no enemy could escape their reach.

Moving Residences

Each warship was a self-contained ecosystem, capable of housing thousands of inhabitants. The fleets were manned by the finest warriors of the Divine Triad, including Heavenly Soldiers, Apostles of God, Dark Apostles, Shadow Lords, and Fiery Dragon Lords. These warships were not only vessels of destruction but also homes for their crew, complete with living quarters, training facilities, and sacred halls for prayer and meditation.

Moving Bases

The warships served as mobile command centers, equipped with advanced communication systems that allowed the Divine Triad’s forces to coordinate their operations across the vast multiverse. Each vessel housed a central command room, where generals and emissaries could strategize and oversee battles in real time.

Moving Fortresses

Defensively, the warships were impregnable. Their outer shells were forged from celestial metals imbued with the power of the Absolute Crown, making them resistant to both physical and magical attacks. Shields generated by divine energy enveloped the ships, providing an additional layer of protection. Internally, the ships were fortified with intricate runes and wards, ensuring that even if an enemy breached their defenses, they would face insurmountable resistance.

A Testament to the Divine Triad’s Might

The sight of the warfleets in motion was awe-inspiring. The warships, accompanied by their escort of space-frigates, moved with an elegance that belied their immense power. They were the ultimate divine tools, a declaration of the Divine Triad’s unmatched supremacy and their unwavering commitment to the protection and balance of the multiverse.

Wherever these fleets traveled, they left an indelible mark—a reminder that the Divine Triad’s reach was infinite, and their resolve unshakable. Whether as a moving arsenal, residence, base, or fortress, the divine warfleets were the ultimate embodiment of their creators’ will.